Spanish Women.

I may here say that poets have pictured Seville belles as "dark-eyed angels." Like the proverb I quote above, there is more poetry than truth in this gushing expression. I never yet saw a BALM gushing expression. I never yet saw a dark-eyed angel portrayed by a painter, though there may be many of them ready to pose for that enviable position; and I have seen more beautiful women here with blue rather than black eyes. A sort of deep violet blue, look out the window and shake hands with your opposite neighbors without any undue physical effort, you see such eyes of unholy hue—deep, dark, and vengeful—that the poet prates about and calls the "carbon orbs"—fiery fellows! But in the big streets, where you may jump across the trottoirs and yet into the drawing room, stables and get into the drawing room, stables and kitchens, all at one time and in one place, there are the violet-eyed belles with "virgin smiles and sweetened soul"—whatever Byron means by that! Irregular, long complicated, crooked and eel-liked streets here have eyes that the less said about the better. I mention these points in order to dispel the panegyries of any poet who may have on the stocks a gleaming, gushing brochure on Seville's "silvery stream, creamy streets, or dark." yed bells." At Cadiz you are at once impressed with the smallness of the

Holes were accordingly made about twenty yards apart, and in the proportion of about twelve per acre. These holes were from 18 inches to 20 inches in depth, and 2 feet one way by 13 feet the other, and were much wider at the bottom, so that the vermin, when once in, could not easily get out again. In three or four months at least 30, 000 mice were caught in this way, and, considering that large numbers were killed in traps, by poison and by ani-mals and birds of prey, it was computed that the destruction of mice in the two forests would probably amount to 200,000.—Pall Mall Budget.

AN AGED SINNER.-John Wilson, a THIS IS graylaired old man, living near Mulberry, Ark., during the absence from home of her parents, on Sunday, called on his 16-year-old niece and persuaded her to flee with him. When the father learned of the elopement he started in pursuit with a shotgun. Wilson re-fused to give up the girl when Sum-mers lifted his gun and killed Wilson instantly. He then took his daughter home. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.
